TO MY QUEEN

Maloktyyy

The most beautiful chapter my heart has ever known.

Our story began on

2 June

The day we started talking, and my life changed in the most beautiful way.

Thank God every day for sending you into my life.

A BOOK FULL OF MY HEART,
WRITTEN ONLY FOR YOU.

The Day My Heart Found Yours

There are moments in life that quietly become a part of us forever Moments we never realize will change our lives until we look back at them months or even years later and smile because everything beautiful somehow began there

For me that moment was the second of June

It was not just another day on a calendar and it was never just our first conversation To everyone else it may have looked like an ordinary day but to me it became one of the most beautiful days my heart has ever known Because without realizing it that day gave me something I never knew I was waiting for

It gave me you

I never imagined that one conversation would become my favorite memory or that one person would slowly become my favorite part of every day Yet somehow life had more beautiful plans for me than I could have ever imagined

Little by little you became a part of my days My favorite notification My favorite voice after a long day and the reason why I smile at my phone more times than I could ever count

You became my Maloktyyy My Kototy My Koty and my Nono The sweetest names I have ever spoken belong to the sweetest person I have ever met

Sometimes I wonder if you know how many times I have thanked God for allowing our paths to cross because I do not think I will ever stop being grateful for that beautiful coincidence

There are people we meet and slowly forget and then there are people who quietly become a part of our hearts forever You became one of those people to me

And perhaps my favorite thing about our story is that it never needed extraordinary moments to become beautiful It was always the simplest things that made me fall in love with it A conversation that lasted longer than we expected A laugh we shared together or simply knowing that no matter how difficult my day was hearing your voice would always make it feel a little lighter

The truth is that this book is not about how much I love you because I know that no number of pages could ever be enough for that

This book is about you

About the beautiful soul I was lucky enough to meet on the second of June

And perhaps one day when we look back at these pages together we will smile because we will remember that every beautiful chapter had to begin somewhere

And ours began with a simple conversation that quietly changed my world forever

The Reason I Never Want Our Story To End

If the second of June was the day our story began then your smile was the reason I wanted it to never end

Do you know what I wish for the most Sometimes I wish I could see you through my own eyes just for a moment so you could finally understand why I write all of these pages about you

You would see the things I fall in love with over and over again without even trying

You would see how your smile has become one of my favorite things in this world and how something as simple as hearing you laugh can make an ordinary day feel beautiful

I do not think I have ever found the right words to describe your eyes because every word I think of somehow feels too small They have a softness in them that makes everything around me feel quieter and more peaceful and sometimes I wonder if you realize just how beautiful they are

But as much as I love your beautiful eyes and your beautiful smile there is something I love even more

Your soul

Because people may notice beautiful smiles and beautiful eyes but very few people are lucky enough to discover a beautiful soul and I was lucky enough to find both in you

One of my favorite things about you is something that I do not think everyone notices It is the kindness that lives quietly inside your heart The beautiful way you make people smile without even realizing it and the way your happiness somehow finds its way into the hearts of the people who love you

I wish you could understand how beautiful you truly are not only on your happiest days but every single day

There are moments when I find myself smiling while remembering the smallest things about you The way you laugh The excitement in your voice when you are happy and the countless little moments that no one else in this world knows except us

And somehow those little moments became some of my favorite memories

I want you to know that my favorite version of happiness was never something extraordinary It was always something simple It was hearing your voice after a long day It was spending hours talking to you without noticing how quickly time passed and it was finding myself smiling because of something you said hours ago

You became one of my favorite prayers long before I ever realized it because every time I thank God for the beautiful things in my life somehow your name always finds its place among them

And perhaps that is why I will never get tired of writing about you because every page somehow reminds me that there are still a thousand beautiful things left unsaid

And if there is one thing I hope you always remember after reading these pages it is this

You are so much more beautiful than the words I write about you and you will always be one of the most beautiful blessings God has ever written into my story

The Little Moments That Became My Favorite Memories

Some of my favorite memories were never places or gifts They were simply moments spent with you

People often believe that happiness is found in extraordinary things but loving you taught me that happiness can be hidden inside the smallest moments of our lives Sometimes it is hidden inside a laugh we share together or a conversation that was supposed to last ten minutes but somehow becomes hours without either of us realizing where the time went

And somehow those moments became my favorites

I love that we can spend hours talking and still feel like there is so much left to say I love how time feels different whenever I am with you because somehow it always moves too fast

There are days when I tell myself that we will only talk for a little while and suddenly the sun has gone down and I am still smiling because I am listening to my favorite voice

I hope we never lose that

I hope we always remain the two people who can laugh over the silliest things and stay awake talking about absolutely nothing and somehow feel like we talked about everything

I hope we never stop playing games together and teasing each other over the smallest things

I hope we never stop being best friends

Because before anything else my favorite thing about us has always been how comfortable and happy I feel whenever you are around

I do not need extraordinary moments to feel lucky because happiness has never been complicated when it comes to you It has always been simple

It is hearing you laugh during our calls

It is reading your messages when I least expect them

It is finding myself smiling because of a memory we created together only a few hours ago

And do you know what makes me smile the most Sometimes I realize that some of the happiest moments of my life were moments that nobody else would ever understand They were never grand celebrations or unforgettable adventures They were simply moments that belonged only to us

A joke that made us laugh until we could barely breathe

A game that became more fun simply because we played it together

A late night conversation that I never wanted to end

And I would not trade those moments for anything in this world

People spend their whole lives chasing happiness without realizing that sometimes happiness quietly arrives as a beautiful soul that turns ordinary days into beautiful memories

For me happiness became listening to you talk about your day and smiling because I know that I get to be a part of it

And if one day life becomes busy and difficult I hope we never stop making time for the little things because I truly believe that the little things are what make love so beautiful

So I hope years from now we will still laugh at silly things and tell each other stories before sleeping I hope we will still find joy in the simplest moments because they have always been my favorite ones

After all my favorite place has never been a place at all

It has always been wherever my heart feels happiest

And somehow my heart always feels happiest whenever it finds you

The Dreams That Still Wait For Us

Before I dreamt about beautiful places I dreamt about beautiful tomorrows and somehow every one of them had you in it

One of my favorite things about life is knowing that it is filled with places we have never seen memories we have never made and beautiful moments that are still waiting patiently for us

I often find myself wondering which country will make us smile the most or which sunset will become our favorite memory I wonder which little café we will accidentally discover or which photograph we will look back at years from now and laugh because we still remember every detail of that day

I dream of beautiful things for us

Not because they are extraordinary but because they are ours

I dream of happiness finding us in the simplest moments I dream of laughing until our faces hurt because of a silly joke that only we understand I dream of conversations that never seem to end and memories that become more beautiful every time we remember them

I hope that no matter how much life changes around us we never stop being ourselves I hope we never stop laughing during our calls or smiling at the smallest things I hope we never stop finding happiness in ordinary moments because they have always been my favorite ones

And if I could ask God for something after thanking Him for bringing you into my life I would ask Him to always protect your smile

I would ask Him to fill your days with happiness and your heart with peace

I would ask Him to make every beautiful dream that lives quietly inside your heart find its way to you one day

Because loving someone also means wishing beautiful things for them even before they become your own wishes

I want to celebrate every success that makes you proud of yourself I want to be the first person cheering for your dreams and the person who reminds you that you are capable of more beautiful things than you sometimes believe

And do you know what my favorite dream of all is

It is not about places or photographs or anything extraordinary

It is simply the idea that years from now we will still be smiling at the little things that made us happy from the very beginning

That we will still laugh over silly jokes

That we will still stay up talking longer than we planned

That we will still look at one another with gratitude and quietly thank God for every beautiful chapter He allowed us to write together

Because the truth is that my favorite dreams were never about where I wanted to go

They were always about who I hoped would be there when I arrived

And somehow every beautiful tomorrow I have ever imagined has always found a place for you inside it

The Promises My Heart Will Always Keep

Love is not only found in beautiful words It is found in the promises we choose to keep every single day

And if there is one thing I wish for you to always know it is that I will never stop choosing kindness when it comes to your heart

I promise to always remind you how beautiful you are on the days when you forget

I promise to celebrate your happiest moments as if they were my own and to remind you of your strength whenever life feels difficult

I promise that no matter how many years pass I will never stop appreciating the little things about you The smile that brightens my day The laugh that makes me forget everything around me and the beautiful soul that I thank God for more times than you could ever imagine

I promise that I will never become too busy to ask you how your day was or too comfortable to stop appreciating your presence in my life Because I never want loving you to become something ordinary to me

I promise that I will always make time for our conversations our laughter and the little moments that quietly became some of my favorite memories

And I promise that years from now I will still smile whenever I hear your voice just as I do today

There is another promise that means more to me than all the others

I promise that I will never stop praying for your happiness

I will pray for your beautiful dreams to become reality

I will pray for peace to always find its way into your heart

I will pray that life is always gentle with your beautiful soul

And I will continue thanking God for every moment that allows me to know you and appreciate the blessing that you are

I know that life changes people and changes circumstances but I hope one thing never changes between us

I hope we never stop being best friends

I hope we never stop laughing over silly things or smiling because of simple moments that nobody else would understand

I hope we never stop creating beautiful memories together no matter how ordinary they may seem to everyone else

And if there is one promise that my heart whispers more than any other it is this

I promise that I will never stop appreciating the second of June because it was the day my story became more beautiful than I ever imagined

And no matter how many beautiful tomorrows life has waiting for us I know that one of my favorite things about them will always be the fact that somewhere inside them there is you

And If I Had One Last Page To Write

If I had one last page to write about you I do not think I would fill it with beautiful words I would simply fill it with gratitude

Gratitude for every smile that found its way into my life because of you

Gratitude for every conversation that made an ordinary day feel beautiful

Gratitude for every memory we have created together and every beautiful memory that still waits patiently for us somewhere in the future

You taught me that happiness does not always arrive loudly Sometimes it arrives quietly and slowly becomes one of the most beautiful parts of our lives

And that is exactly how you became one of the most beautiful parts of mine

Before you I never knew that something as simple as hearing someone's voice could become my favorite part of the day I never knew that I could smile at my phone simply because of a name appearing on my screen or that hours could feel like minutes whenever I was talking to someone

And then I met you

There are so many things I hope life gives you I hope it gives you every beautiful dream that has ever lived inside your heart I hope it gives you endless reasons to smile and countless moments that remind you just how precious and appreciated you truly are

I hope life is always kind to you

I hope happiness always finds its way back to your heart no matter how far it may wander

And I hope you never forget how beautiful your soul truly is because sometimes I feel like you do not realize just how much light you bring into the lives of the people who love you

Perhaps one day we will read these pages again and laugh at how many dreams we wrote between these lines Perhaps we will smile while remembering our late night conversations our games and all the little things that quietly became some of our favorite memories

And perhaps we will realize that the most beautiful thing about our story was never where it was going but the fact that we were grateful for every step of it

People often say that beautiful things never last forever but I disagree because some beautiful things do last They simply grow with time

Kindness grows

Memories grow

Gratitude grows

And the appreciation we have for the people who make our lives brighter grows too

So if I had one final thing to say after all these pages it would simply be thank you

Thank you for being yourself

Thank you for every laugh we shared

Thank you for every beautiful memory

And thank you for becoming one of the greatest blessings I have ever received

Finally I want to leave one sentence on the very last line of this book

If someone asked me what the second of June gave me I would never answer with a date

I would simply smile and say

And if there is something I have learned from loving you it is that love is not measured by the grand things we do for one another It is measured by the little things we never stop doing

It is choosing one another every single day

It is asking how your day was even after the longest days

It is staying a little longer during our calls because neither of us wants to say goodbye first

It is laughing over games that we will probably forget one day while knowing that we will never forget how happy they made us feel

It is finding peace in knowing that somewhere in this world there is someone whose smile matters so much to your heart

And somehow you became all of that to me

Sometimes I wonder if one day I will run out of beautiful things to write about you but every time I think that I realize I was wrong because every day gives me another reason to appreciate you a little more than I did yesterday

I love that my favorite memories are not extraordinary memories They are simply ours

They are the moments when we laugh until we forget what we were laughing about

The moments when we stay awake longer than we should because talking to one another always feels like the best part of the day

The moments when life feels gentle and beautiful simply because we are sharing it together

And do you know what I pray for the most

I pray that years from now I will still be writing beautiful things about you

I pray that I never become too comfortable to appreciate your smile or too busy to tell you how grateful I am for your existence

I pray that my heart never gets used to being loved by you because I want it to feel just as grateful fifty years from now as it feels today

And if God allows me one lifetime I hope I spend it becoming a better person than I was yesterday kinder than I was before and more deserving of every beautiful thing He has written into my story

Because one of the most beautiful things He ever wrote into it was you

You will always be my favorite hello after a difficult day and one of my favorite reasons to smile before I sleep

And no matter how many pages I write about you there will always be one truth that refuses to fit between the lines

I will always be grateful that out of all the stories in this world ours found its way to my heart

It gave me a beautiful soul named Malak